GUIDES ENJOY BANQUET-SHOW TUESDAY NIGHT

George W. Lynch, Proprietor of Eagle Hotel, Host to Tourists' Escorts.

What the battlefield guides can and are doing to advertise and popularize Gettysburg as a tourist center formed the keynote of addresses by several speakers at a banquet at the Eagle Hotel, Tuesday evening, when the guides and representatives of various other organizations were guests of George W. Lynch, proprietor of the hotel, and Mrs. Lynch.

It was an evening filled to the brim with good things to eat, worth-while addresses and jollification, and to say the guides enjoyed themselves is putting it mildly, according to persons who attended. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch were thanked individually and collectively by the guides for their thoughtfulness in arranging so entertaining an affair.

Shortly after the diners—almost one hundred of them—sat down to the five course dinner, John McDonnell, a guide, and county sealer of weights, who presided as toastmaster, called for a rising tribute of appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Lynch, and with cheers and applause the guides paid that tribute to their hosts.

Lee's Anniversary

By coincidence, the affair was held on the anniversary of the birth of "that great leader of the South," General Robert E. Lee, who opposed Meade on the field at Gettysburg. Mention of this fact by William C. Storrick, superintendent of guides, and first speaker, brought prolonged applause from the guides.

Especially for the occasion, Clarence M. Swinn, a junior at Gettysburg College, and a guide, wrote a song, "We are Battlefield Guides," to the tune of "I've Been Working on the Railroad." The song was sung for the guides, who found it considerably to their liking because the last line of the chorus, supposedly spoken by a tourist, "Yes, We Want a Guide," contained words every guide enjoys hearing.

Mr. Storrick brought greetings to the guides from Colonel E. B. Cope, superintendent of the battlefield, who was unable to attend the affair. The need for practicing the Golden Rule and for boosting Gettysburg not only (Continued on Second Page)

LEGION'S SHOW DIRECTOR HERE

Miss Hazel Anderson, who will direct the staging of "Bimbo," the American Legion's show to be given at the Majestic Theatre, February 4, met the eighty-eight persons in the cast and chorus for the production on Tuesday. The director outlined the nature of the performance, which is a musical comedy, and set times and places for rehearsals.

The John B. Rogers' Producing Company which sent Miss Anderson here to direct "Bimbo" has directed other local home talent performances in recent years, one of the best remembered being "Kathleen." "Bimbo" is being given for the first time this year by amateur performers, and indications are that the show will be a success.

Lauds Qualities Of Dr. H. W. A. Hanson

Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College, is the subject of an article appearing under the caption "The Velvet Hammer," a daily feature of the Evening News of Harrisburg, in its Tuesday edition. The article follows:

"A lot of college presidents, in these resounding days, are overshadowed by the lad with fancy football ways. It may be said that being head, abstractly and aloof, has less of weight in this grave date than being college hoof; but Doctor Henry Hanson ably educates the lad in real affairs which thrive upstairs for which we're duly glad.

"At eighteen years a graduate from college, kindly note, he did not spend his early life in copying the goat. He went abroad to Europe to absorb some master thought; as pastor, left his stations with new buildings planned and wrought. From colleges whose honors are reserved for proper cause, he holds degrees of doctor in divinity and laws.

"He heads the goodly Gettysburg, a college wide of fame, equipping young ambitions for the everlasting game. A brother in societies of many noble fronts, Rotarian and mixer in refined Masonic stunts, he travels both by land and sea and in the books he reads, and knows the poise and patience that a Christian golfer needs."

Change Dates Of Hanover's Fair

The Hanover fair will be held this year on September 28, 29, 30 and October 1 or one week later than has been the custom in previous seasons. The change in dates was decided upon at the annual stock holders meeting Monday evening in the offices of the Hanover Agricultural Society on the second floor of the S. & M. Building. The stockholders also voted to increase the indebtedness by $10,000 for the purpose of making permanent improvements on the fair grounds including the construction of an entire new fence.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Jan. 20.—Apprehension over the decision of Federal Reserve and Stock Exchange authorities to publish official figures of brokers' loans continued to exert a depressing influence on stock prices at the opening of today's market. Selling pressure was exerted against most of the leading rails and industrials. Although constructive interests had the benefit of the effect on sentiment by a reduction in the renewal rate of call money from four and one half to four per cent, they were unable to hold the market against fresh selling orders.

CHANCES BETTER FOR COLLEGE MEN DADS-SONS TOLD

Dr. J. A. Singmaster Is Principal Speaker At York Banquet.

"Two hundred to one are the chances that the college graduate has over the one who has no college education," was one of the forceful statements of Dr. J. A. Singmaster, venerable president of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary, when he spoke before more than 400 fathers and sons at a "Fathers and Sons" banquet, held last night in the chapel of the Christ Lutheran church, York. "And then, to succeed," continued the aged theologian, "we must have clean hands, clean thoughts, be zealous and always aim high, so that if we do fall a little short of the mark, we still have gained something worth while." His subject was "Claims of the Gospel Ministry as a Life Calling Upon the Youth of the Church."

Special music was furnished by the Gettysburg College Band and quartet; a number of special prize awards were made and several very inspiring addresses were made by men whose years of experience fitted them to give sound advice to the many sons. The band was transported to York by members of the Men's Brotherhoods of Christ and St. James Lutheran churches here.

Gettysburg Band Plays

The program opened with several selections by the Gettysburg College Band. P. A. Elssesser, president of the York Y. M. C. A., acted as toastmaster. A short address by Mr. Elssesser was followed by a number of selections by the male quartet of Gettysburg College. An award of a two pound box of candy was then made to Daniel Meckley, who was present with the largest number of sons. Four sons sat by his side. Another prize award was then made for the oldest father present. This went to Rev. William H. Menges, York, who is 84 years old. He was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Rev. Menges has been an active minister of the gospel for many years and now has two sons following the same profession.

The program continued with another song and a prayer by Rev. William H. Traub, D. D. This was followed by a responsive service by the fathers and sons, after which a banquet was served by the ladies of Christ Lutheran church.

Address by Rev. Dean

Rev. Dean, of Hanover, spoke briefly on "Relation of Father and Son in the Business of Christian Life." Following this there was music by the Gettysburg College Band, after which another address was delivered by Dr. W. H. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College. He spoke on "What Kind of an Education Shall We Give Our Sons." Speaking in reference to the college boy of today, he said, "We want them to be clean, courageous and Christ-like."

Near the close of the meeting all the fathers and sons present were given cards to register. An appeal was made for young men who are willing to consider the Gospel ministry as their goal in seeking a life vocation, and as a result two young men from out of the audience signified their intention to study and prepare for the ministry.

Legion Flagstaff Offered To Firemen

Members of the Albert J. Lentz American Legion post have offered to the fire company the flagpole which stands in front of the former post home on York street. The home was sold recently to Herbert L. Oyler, and the legion is planning to take down the fifty-foot steel pole, given to the legion by A. B. Plank, plumber.

Inasmuch as the flag staff was given to the legion post by Mr. Plank, the legionaires do not wish to give the pole out-right, reserving the right to take it back if and when they secure a new home.

The pole is set in five feet of cement, and can only be removed by cutting it off at the pavement line.

Fathers-Sons Will Banquet In Hanover

The Fathers and Sons banquet of the Lutheran churches of the Hanover district will be held this evening. A crowd estimated at close to 500 is expected to attend the affair, which has been divided into two groups, with a joint gathering for the program to follow. Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, of Gettysburg College, and Dr. J. A. Singmaster, of the Seminary, are two of the speakers. The college band will also take part in the program.

2 NEW DISEASES OF PEACH FOUND

Speaker Before Horticultural Society Tells of Diseases Which Have Appeared Here.

Two new diseases of the peach which have appeared in Adams and Franklin counties formed the subject of an address by W. A. McCubbin, bureau of plant industry, Pennsylvania State Department of Agriculture, before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society at Harrisburg today.

The first of the diseases has been named the "rootlet rot," Mr. McCubbin said. This disease is marked by the dying of the rootlets. The leaves are rolled, yellow, burned on the edges and fall early. Growth is very short and weak so that fruit buds either do not form or lack vigor. The rootlet killing which is the primary cause of these symptoms seems to be due to unbalanced fertilizer conditions in the soil. In any case it was completely cured by comparatively small applications of nitrate and potash fertilizers. Where both were used there was a remarkable recovery, Mr. McCubbin said. He also pointed out that a single treatment lasted through two seasons.

The second disease, the speaker said, has been observed for a number of years and has foliage symptoms almost like those of the other. A peculiar abnormal development of the wood in the trunk at the ground level is noticed. The wood layers do not develop the woody texture nor do they have the usual number of sap conducting cells. In affected trees the whole outer portion is so soft in character and cuts and breaks so readily that the trouble has been called "punky rot" by local growers. Affected trees almost invariably die after a couple years. The real cause and possible control methods are still to be found.

Former Gettysburg Merchant Succumbs

Jacob A. Rich, who for five years conducted a grocery and tea store on Chambersburg street, died Tuesday at the Harrisburg Hospital. He was aged 69 years.

FARM CROPS OF 1925 INCREASE TWELVE PER CENT

Are Greater Than In Previous Year, According to Survey Recently Completed.

The value of all crops grown on Pennsylvania farms in the 1925 season was twelve per cent greater than in 1924, the total value being reported at $304,852,000 in the estimates issued by the Pennsylvania Federal-State Crop Reporting Service, Department of Agriculture. The value of the 1924 crops was $272,043,000, the average value in the years 1919 to 1923, $308,040,000 and the value reported by the Federal Census in 1919, the last year of war prices, $409,969,000.

Pennsylvania ranks thirteenth in the value of farm crops among the states, according to Paul L. Koenig, agricultural statistician. Texas, Iowa, California, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Ohio rank ahead of this state in the order named.

The total area in crops in 1925 was estimated to be 7,712,000 acres, three per cent larger than the 7,486,000 acres in 1924, when seasonal conditions prevented Pennsylvania farmers from making their full plantings. Increases were made in the acreages of corn, oats and buckwheat while, of the other leading crops, only wheat was not decreased.

First In Buckwheat

Pennsylvania ranked first in the production of buckwheat, third in potatoes, fourth in tame hay, fifth in grapes, sixth in tobacco, all apples and all hay, seventh in wheat and rye, eighth in pears, ninth in commercial apples, tenth in cloverseed, twelfth in corn and oats and sixteenth in peaches.

Hay and corn were again the two leading crops respectively in total value. Potatoes displaced wheat from third place to fourth, with oats, apples and tobacco following in their usual ranking. The composite average value per acre of all the leading crops—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, white potatoes, sweet potatoes, tobacco, hay and cloverseed—was $33.69 in 1925, compared with $30.90 in 1924, $27.43 in 1923 and $25.59 in 1922.

The increase in the value of the Pennsylvania potato crop, from approximately twenty to fifty million dollars, with practically identical yields in both years, is explained in the fact that the total production for the United States is 100,000,000 bushels below the 1924 production and about 90,000,000 below the average, the smallest and most inadequate crop since 1919. Pennsylvania normally ranks fifth or sixth in potato production. A season more favorable to this state than others accounts for the elevation in rank to third this year.

PAVING CASES ARE LISTED FOR TRIAL NEXT WEEK

Twenty-two Actions Begun By Borough Scheduled For Wednesday.

Legal lines of defense were being drawn up today by opposing attorneys for the court struggle here next week as a result of the refusal of 22 property owners on Hanover street, to pay their street paving bills.

Both Attorney J. Donald Swope, for the borough, and Attorney William Hersh, for the property owners, have subpoenaed numerous witnesses, directing them to be in court next Wednesday when the test case is scheduled for trial.

The "Borough of Gettysburg vs. Dr. Edw. D. Hudson," the first of the 22 cases on the list, will be made the test action, on the outcome of which disposition of the other cases will rest.

Court house observers are doubtful if the Hanover street cases will be called for trial next Wednesday, pointing out that an unusually large criminal list must be disposed of before the civil suits can be taken up. Among the criminal cases scheduled for trial are two murder cases, but it was indicated at the district attorney's office today that probably one of them would be continued until the April term of court.

$3,000 Involved

The amount of money involved in the borough's suits against the Hanover street dwellers totals in the neighborhood of $3,000, although the borough also is asking for interest from the beginning of the court actions. The cases were first listed for trial last April, then postponed until last November, when they were again put off until the coming term.

Hanover street was paved in the fall of 1922, and some of the property owners refused to pay their street paving assessments on the ground that the work was not properly done. The borough gave its final approval of the work in 1924, two years after the work was finished, and followed that with the court actions in an effort to bring in the outstanding claims which it has against the property owners.

Some Have Paid

Before the suits were instigated, a number of the property owners on Hanover street paid their street paving bills without murmur.

Besides Doctor Hudson, Hanover street residents named in the court actions are Roy E. Zinn, former county treasurer; H. J. Hartman, former county sheriff; Edward H. Shultz, W. H. Gallagher, Mrs. Sarah E. Cook, Joachim Conti, Charles Weikert, Ellis Schwartz, Mrs. Veronica Speece Motica, Mrs. Pius Breighner, Levi Diehl, J. J. Spence, Lester Oyler, Edwin H. Shultz, Samuel Allison, Raphael Fissel heirs, Samuel Fissel, William Biddle, Harry Oyler, B. Schmukler and Augustus Aumen.

Senator Reed, resuming a long speech against the world court, remarked that he would not attack the vice president on the floor of the Senate because the vice president could not make a reply although he had attacked him over the radio last night when he could not reply.

The vice president, who was presiding, interrupted to say that he was not referring to Senator Reed but to "the senator from New York" when he told a radio audience last night that a fresh demonstration of the need for a rules revision had been given during yesterday's session of the Senate.

Ships Halt in Night to Transfer Mother and Body of Dead Child

New York, Jan. 20.—The midnight transfer at sea of a mother and her dead son from the liner Southern Cross to the liner Pan-America caused the former ship to dock several hours later than scheduled time Tuesday.

Marino de Conde, 9-year-old son of Mme. Juana de Conde, died of heart trouble while he and his mother were bound for New York from South America on the Southern Cross. Mme. Conde, who was coming to New York to be correspondent for La Nacion, a Rio Janeiro newspaper, insisted that she be landed or transferred to a ship which would take her back to her home.

Stolen Autos Are Traced Through The Registry Of State

Forty-six per cent of the automobiles reported as stolen in this state last year were recovered because of the certificate of title law, according to information at the State Highway Department yesterday. The department received reports of 1917 stolen vehicles, and of them 881 were recovered. Approximately one hundred additional cars were recovered through applications for titles for cars that had been reported missing, or on information sent to the department on abandoned cars. The figures of cars stolen and recovered include none except those registered in Pennsylvania.

Lebanon Scrubs Won Battle Here

Instead of winning from the Lebanon scrubs last Saturday night, the high school scrubs lost 17-16. The score board showed a 17-16 victory for Lebanon, but the Gettysburg score board showed a 16-15 victory for the local team. Many people commented on the final outcome of the game and, in order to put all doubt aside, Coach Reynolds wrote to Lebanon, who immediately forwarded their score book. The book showed plainly that Lebanon had won 17-16, a field goal by W. Light in the third quarter failing to be recorded.

This defeat marked the scrubs third defeat out of eleven starts.

APPLICATION OF YOUNG CAVALIER IS ARGUED TODAY

(By Associated Press.)

Harrisburg, Jan. 20.—Application of William Cavalier, 15-year-old Schuylkill county boy under sentence to be executed for the killing of his grandmother, was argued before the state board of pardons here today.

Opposition to clemency was offered by Silas Palmer, district attorney of Schuylkill county, following a plea for commutation by the boy's counsel. A petition signed by ten thousand persons in New York state was presented.

Available records show Cavalier to be the youngest person ever to be sentenced to death by a Pennsylvania court. His sentence aroused sympathy throughout the state and newspapers and persons protested against the imposition of the death penalty.

SAYS GARLAND'S COLONY IS "RED"

Muhlenberg President Tells Students April Farm Is Nest of Communism.

Allentown, Jan. 20.—Denouncing Charles S. Garland's colony, near Coopersburg, which came into public notice more than a week ago through a master's recommendation to the Lehigh County Court to refuse a charter to the April Farm Association, as a nest of Communism, Dr. John A. W. Haas, president of Muhlenberg College, in an address before the Allentown High senior class warned that drastic steps must be taken to stem the propaganda of the Reds.

Dr. Haas said: "Lately there has come into our community a colony known as April Farm. What lies back of it? It is not simply a question of free love, but has far greater import; it is a part of a greater movement of extreme communistic tendencies. The immense sum of money which this man Garland has placed in a trust fund is money being spent for radical purposes, purposes that will not make the world a better place to live in."

"The movement of which April Farm is a part forms the basis of an anti-patriotic pacifism, a revolutionary Communism, the fundamental character of which is antireligious. The first duty is to destroy the faith of man in God. A United States investigator said that this whole movement is preparing to make an organized revolt in ten years."

"The main question is, will society be bettered by allowing organizations of this sort, organizations that would create free schools for the teaching of extreme nationalism? This is merely a wild dream of communistic theory, merely a new stage upon which it has entered. It is for us to watch it more closely and create public opinion against it. As they are being pushed from one territory to another, they are claiming that they are being persecuted, striving to win public sympathy. It is clearly evident they are working under cover, for in all their answers they have been very evasive."

"Clearly we must answer this question for ourselves, what do we want—a sound development of human society or the downfall of everything worth while?"

Miners Anxious To Schedule BB. Games

The Hill A. C., of Taylor, Pennsylvania, one of the fastest basketball teams in Northeast Pennsylvania, is anxious to schedule games with teams of their standing in Gettysburg or vicinity. For information about games, managers are requested to write James Solmon, 1203 Mable street, Taylor, Pennsylvania.

for its historic connection, but for its worth as a community, aside from the battlefield, was voiced by Mr. Storick. The guides' superintendent stated that within a few days he would announce the list of guides for the ensuing year.

Outside Competitors
After pointing out the publicity and advertising given Gettysburg through the medium of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Lynch, the host, declared "My competition is not here in Gettysburg with the other hotels, but in Chambersburg, Harrisburg, York and Hanover, where efforts are constantly being made to attract travelers."

The growth of cooperation between the guides and battlefield guards was pointed out as commendable by George McClellan, one of the guards, who added that the park authorities are satisfied with the manner in which the guides are protecting the government's properties, and compelling the tourists to do the same.

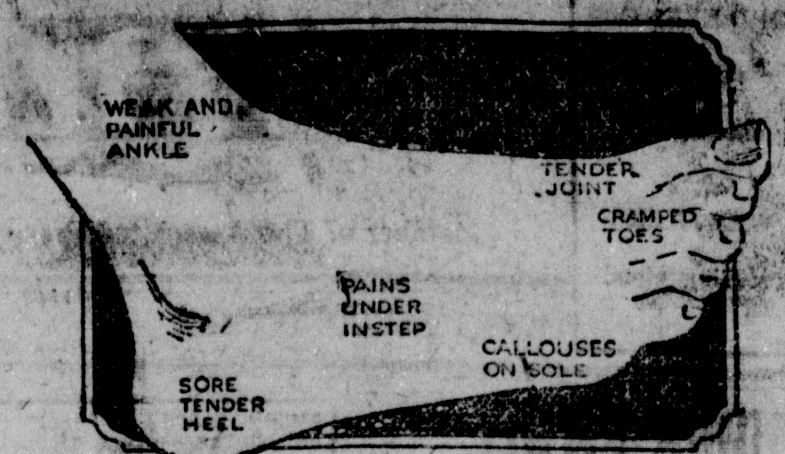

"You men are the keepers of the town and battlefield, and can, and are doing more to advertise Gettysburg than any other group here," Edmund W. Thomas, president of the Chamber of Commerce, declared. He told of the distribution of the majority of the 50,000 Gettysburg road maps and folders last year, and predicted that business would thereby be stimulated, since calls for additional supplies for the folders have been received from Maine to California.

Burgess C. A. Heiges, the next speaker, urged the guides to "live lives that will be a credit to the town and an example for others to follow." He said there are many persons in Gettysburg who have no respect for laws and law enforcement, adding, "You men can do much in making Gettysburg bigger and better."

Attend Theatre Party
Rufus H. Bushman, president of the Battlefield Guides' Association, probably the only organization of its kind in the United States and in the world, urged the guides to join the association, setting forth its two objects as cooperation and better service to tourists.

He declared that Gettysburg "plays host" to 1,250,000 people annually, and expressed the hope that Gettysburgians will say the guides are an asset and not a liability to the town. After the banquet, many of the guides attended the moving picture show at the Lincoln Way Theatre, tickets having been distributed by the management at the banquet.

"Tricks," she confessed, laughing to him. "I could hold my own with George—She's been rather a chum, you know—or with any of the rest. If they had somebody I wanted I usually landed them if I tried, and they had to start early to get anyone away from me—but now, well, I'm in for new competition now."

A woman, a young woman, whose smooth black hair clung to a beautifully formed head, a woman with sombre black eyes that suggested twin flowers of night, hovered close to the table and gazed. An observer would have thought that she had stopped, and was about to speak to one or the other of the pair at the table. But she moved on, her slender hand fluttering at her escort's sleeve. Only one who observed very closely would have detected the almost imperceptible signal that Brandon passed to her with a gesture of his finger. Joanna was not even conscious of the little tableau of an instant. Brandon kept her attention.

"You think, then, that your problems will have to do mostly with . . . what you are calling competition from your own sex? That implies that your plans, when formed, will be a conquest of men?"

Joanna's brow wrinkled. "That sounds as if I'd admitted something I shouldn't. Won't you tell me what?"

"But you haven't," he protested, earnestly. "What else should there be for you to plan—but to bring the moths to your candle? Could there be anything more interesting for a girl so lovely, and so free from care?"

Joanna smiled into his eyes, brightly. "There really isn't anything else to do, is there? For a while I shall be buying things. No one will tell me of any thing else to do with the money. And there are so many things to buy, I hardly know where to start in. I shall have to find someone, too, to help me. George has been my best girl friend, but she's too much like I am. All she can do is to suggest. That's a trick she developed until it's become second nature to her. I imagine men like you, for example, require more effort on the part of girls than we could think of behind the silk counter."

Brandon smiled with her. "You mustn't class me as so different from the rest of your boys as you call them. You have succeeded admirably in captivating me, without added wiles. And you can't put me down as a plain for the hunter, can you? You see I have a famous banker as a dotting uncle and I've heaps of stocks and bonds and such things—so you are not to consider me as having set a trap for your millions."

"There—that's what I mean," Joanna lunged at him. "I shall have to learn how to meet you and your kind when you say things like that. The best sort of talk I've ever had for a man who went right down into deep water was, 'come in out of the wet,' or something like that. John has been the only one I could ever allow to talk seriously to me about—well, about my ever being married, you know."

Brandon caught the wistfulness in her voice, the wistfulness that came into it at every mention of John. His lips curled again, ever so slightly. "You will have to listen to a great many men who will talk of marriage," he said. "I think it is better for you that you had your little smash, last night before you had plunged too far. John will be waiting, when you are ready to call him—if you really want him."

A deep flush warmed Joanna's face. Her eyes hardened. Brandon saw, but he had been deliberate. He met her eyes coldly. Before she could make her attack he dismissed her.

"I fancy that whoever bestowed a fortune upon you would prefer that you be uninfluenced in your spending of it—for a time, at any rate. That, though, is only my own conclusion. Any I'm wondering if you will let John into your new career as snugly as you fitted him into the one behind you."

Again Joanna surveyed the company around her while she considered what sort of a reply to make. She realized that Brandon had been leading up to this—and she was unhappy before a doubt that he had succeeded in planting it in her mind. Would John fit in? Now? Into this gay world of pleasure, joy, unrepression, to which she was being admitted? Could she, with him holding up for her the examples of his own old fashioned ideals, exact from her new opportunities their full need of the only things she knew to be worth while. She hated Brandon, fiercely, she concluded, for conjuring up the doubt, and hating him for the cunning with which he had stirred it.

She was brought abruptly out of her reflections. The woman who had once before hovered at the table, had come up again. Joanna had not seen that quiet signal from Brandon's cigarette which was instantly caught at the nearby table where a woman sat with her escort, a man made much after the pattern of Brandon himself.

Brandon rose and greeted the newcomer. Joanna looked up at her, startled by a sleek, perfectly assembled beauty that was as pungent as the essence of some heavy perfume. Brandon made his presentation easily. Joanna caught the softness of the foreign sounding name, and heard that Brandon called the stranger, "Yvonne." Despite the pretenses, Joanna sensed, instinctively, that the meeting had been arranged.

CHAPTER X.

Joanna Meets Another Suitor

In the sudden cascade of small talk with which the newcomers were settled into their places at the table by two waiters, each more excitable than the other, Joanna was vaguely uncomfortable out of her accustomed depths. A store of smart things seemed utterly inadequate to the easy greetings and partings. Within her own experiences, introductory conversations took one or the other of two set courses—herself, or "himself." She was never concerned with other women, whether they liked her or not. Not the ones who came and went across her horizon. They were all like her, merely rivals, equipped as she was, with the common weapons of our modern flapperhood—lips always shaped for kisses, a ready wisdom that guarded those lips when occasions arose, clothes that added to the lure of her and a skill at defense or attack. In Joanna's scheme of things any girl, these days, must be ready instantly to take the defense or launch an attack—one or the other was certain to be necessary. She and Georgia sat along splendidly in the induction of all new acquaintanceships among the available supply of properly mannered, good-enough-looking young chaps with new places to go. She considered now, when she stole a glance at the man who had come up with the woman with the sleek, black hair, that by the time he had said, "How do you do?" to Georgia, that little lady would have blithely inquired of him:

"Decisions made after midnight are not always safe. I'm going to drive you home," said Brandon.

"Well, now, look who's here: Why do you think you amount to so much?" And she reflected that, this time, Georgia would get the worst of it in any such encounter. As she had concluded a moment before, at her first sight of him, Kenilworth—"Roddy," Brandon had called him—was made in the same mold as Brandon, but there was a difference. She disliked Brandon, because she feared that he was to have some tragic influence over her and her mysterious future, but she admitted, he wouldn't be little. He would not be the sort who would plot for some small favor. If he should want to amuse himself with a woman, he would aim at her soul. She knew the kind—and the danger they embodied.

Kenilworth—he was of the sort she was most accustomed to, only, she had to pretend, to only, she was the superkind that would press to his lips whatever ribbons might come to his finger tips at night, and blow them to the winds in the morning without regard for silk or cotton. She would always have to be on her guard against Brandon. If Kenilworth carried out the threat which lurked in his calculating eyes as he let them sweep over her, she'd cheatmate him, easily. Considering all persons of the other sex as hunters, Joanna fell to wondering what would be the tactics of such a man as Kenilworth who, not being by any means young, must have had divers experiences. She was brought sharply out of this reflection by the young woman with the black hair, whom Brandon had called Yvonne.

"Don't you all know it's horrid to have to pretend," Yvonne said, suddenly, allowing her fingers to flutter over Joanna's wrist, "that we aren't bubbling over with excitement about Miss Manners' amazing news? I, for one, must tell her how thrilling I think it must be." Joanna gave her a grateful glance. "There doesn't seem to be anything else I can think about," she admitted. "If I only knew what, and from whom, Kenilworth mused aloud. Joanna stands for some generosity of the gods, doesn't it? Something like a 'gracious gift.' If I remember my mythology aright, Gods, like gift-horses, mustn't be looked in the mouth. Not even by the loveliest of their favorites. My advice to Miss Manners is to never worry over the source of her dramatic good fortune but proceed to hire as many pipers to make music for her as she wants to pay."

Yvonne laughed a silvery little laugh that Joanna envied. "And you, Roddy, are dying to offer yourself as one of the original pipers," she accused. To Joanna she added brightly:

He's a beast of prey, this Roddy. He has the same accessories in every port that a sailor is supposed to have put away for his shore leaves. You must never take him seriously. Especially when he makes furious love to you." Kenilworth raised a protesting hand, but Yvonne continued, nodding at him.

"Oh, you'll be making love to her before the evening's out." She turned again to Joanna, and informed her, with a trick of dropping her voice into the infectious of a mock confidence that Joanna resolved to practice as soon as she was home: "He'll start in with your eyes, my dear; he has a fancy that young women pin their faith in their eyes and old women on their complexions."

"Don't let her mislead you," Kenilworth pleaded. "She has me confused with someone else. She is positively libelous. I never begin with the eyes, as I'll prove to you as soon as possible!"

"You see!" Yvonne exclaimed. "He prepared you for his onslaughts. You must tell me at once if I am right. It'll be the eyes I'm sure. They're quite pretty you know. I can fancy him ravelling over them."

Brandon came to Joanna's rescue. "She will survive, even Roddy, I'm sure," he commented. "She has a most disconcerting way of putting the proper people in the right places."

Over the coffee they talked of the money, of Graydon, and Eggleston—and quite understood Joanna's inability to make plans. As often as she could Joanna watched Yvonne, and studied her. She was of the kind that seldom comes to the silk counter of a department store. Joanna decided she was a bright example of the butterfly who hovers gaily over the most desirable gardens in that world to which "Miss Twenty-seven, of the silks," had stood no closer than the farthest edge until tonight. And she thought that Yvonne was deliberately reaching out to her, as if to bring her within some common bond. Immediately, though, she considered if this feeling were not born of her own self-consciousness. She concluded she would have to learn, soon, to take these new people, who lived among the bill-people, and knew the real ways she had always imitated, as she found them. With this resolve she smiled, brightly at Kenilworth. He acknowledged it by putting down his cocktail glass.

"I don't know whether you mean it or not," he said, "but you are saying to me that with so much dancing to be done before they turn us out you'd like to be getting busy. May I consider that I'm right?"

When they were on the floor Joanna asked him to repeat Yvonne's name. "I didn't hear, or I didn't understand it," she explained.

"Yvonne will do, quite satisfactorily," Kenilworth assured her. "Whoever knows her knows her well enough to forget the rest of it—if he can! Anyhow, his Constant—the Yvonne Constant you read about. There's a husband here to-night, off in a corner some place. But I don't know which one it is, the first or the last. No use asking her. She's probably forgotten."

Yvonne Constant! Now Joanna knew why her face had fascinated her; why it had seemed so vaguely familiar! Each marriage a sensation, and each divorce a greater one. She had seen her pictured regularly in the Sunday newspapers—that part of them which she really looked at, the illustrated pages. She remembered Yvonne Constant divorcing a college boy who'd run away with a college boy, who was a scion of a family, or something like that. Yvonne Constant engaged to another millionaire's son, and then to an Egyptian prince. Yvonne Constant at Monte Carlo, shocking English duchesses with gowns that wouldn't be allowed even in the movies—one newspaper had described them just that way. And in the most daring of beach costumes at Deauville. Then married to the famous author and promptly divorced in Paris. Joanna knew her Sunday-papered history as girls of another day knew their cook books. The Paris buyer for the store had sent over a dress, one time, which he said was an exact copy of the model worn by Yvonne Constant at the Longchamps races. The store designers had added four inches to the back and front and put on shoulder straps, and made of it a best selling number in the four hundred dollar class. And she, Joanna, yesterday morning "Miss Twenty-seven," had talked with her! Had talked and held her own with her!

"Did you really mean that her husband actually is here, tonight?" she asked her companion.

"One of them. If I spot him I'll give you a nudge. He's with a new flame. Yvonne went over to them, while ago, to see what she's like. Says she's the kind that has golden weddings."

SEVENTH VICTIM OF CLUBBER IS FOUND IN TOLEDO

42-Year-Old Woman Is Found in Yard Near Home; Police Are Baffled by Case.

(By Associated Press.)

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 20.—The body of Mary Handley, 42, seventh victim of a "clubber" in Toledo in less than a year, was found Tuesday in a yard next to her home. Her head was crushed in and she had been gagged with strips of cloth torn from her clothing.

Blood stains on the sidewalk, police said, indicated Miss Handley had been attacked there and dragged into the yard. The body was found by a neighbor woman when she started her daughter to school Tuesday.

The scene of the tragedy is in the heart of the district where the "clubber" operated a few months ago. Miss Handley is the third woman whose death is attributed to the "clubber." Four other women have been severely injured.

HEALTH TALK

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by Dr. J. Moore Campbell, director, Bureau of Communicable Diseases. Dr. Campbell says:

"Fashion in the past has been a real tyrant. In many of the so-called heathen countries it still is. Pounds of brass or iron around the ankles of the South Sea Islanders, thong-pierced noses and tattooed bodies are present indications of the torture to which even yet some of the less advanced branches of the human family will submit in fashion's name."

"To Americans, so recently emancipated from the steel corset, the hoop skirt, the constricted waist, the choke collar and the leather boot, the present habits of the Aborigines seem humorously absurd. It is wonderful to be superior!"

"Unquestionably Dame Fashion is now more reasonable than she has ever been. In wearing apparel, comfort is the keynote. And this is exactly as it should be. There is indeed much to be said for the present styles of dress on the health side alone."

"However, there is one matter which still needs serious consideration. It is the question of shoes. Both men and women are likely to wear shoes that fit too snugly or which are too short. Others actually will undergo punishment from a silly notion that a bit of discomfort is entirely justified if the appearance of the foot is thereby enhanced. Foolish people!"

"Then, too, there is the feminine question of high heels. They may look all right. But they do not give the body a square deal. If nature had intended folks to walk on the bias the feet would have been built that way instead of flat. Some women actually are made ill by over-indulgence in high heels, due directly to faulty posture."

"Corns, bunions, callouses and inflamed joints are direct penalties of shoes that are either too tight or too short. Look your feet over—they will indicate whether in foot-wear you are wise or silly."

"While your feet are the nearest things to the ground, they nevertheless are extremely useful members. Give them a square deal. That is all they ask. It's the least you can do."

"In China foot-binding was once the rage. But China has stopped it. Take a hint from that almond-eyed nation. The chances are you will profit by it and that your feet need it."

FARM CALENDAR

Treat Cows Right—Dairy stables should be kept clean, allowed an abundance of light, and kept well ventilated.

Make Landscape Changes—Now is the time to plan changes in your flower borders or shrub plantings. These can all be worked out on paper and the materials ordered now so that the work can be out of the way early in the spring.

Get Ready for Gardening—Tune up the wheel hoe. See that cultivator teeth and hoes are sharp, metal parts well greased, and handles in good condition. Order replacements for broken parts as well as some extra teeth and hoes to have on hand.

Mate for Hatching Eggs—If hatching eggs are to be collected for early season incubation, it is time to place the breeding males in the pen, specialists at the Pennsylvania State College say.

It is just as undesirable to use too many males as too few. The proper ratio is one male to 20 females for Leghorns and one male to 12 or 15 females in the case of American or dual purpose breeds.

Care for Brood Sows—Are the brood sows getting plenty of exercise these winter days? Be sure that they also get sufficient protein and mineral matter to maintain their body weight and develop a good litter of pigs.

A woman always admires pipe smoking until she marries a man who smokes one.

Nowadays it is almost impossible to respect grey hairs. All of them are dyed black.

Memory is the treasury and guardian of all things. —Cicero.

GIRLS TO PLAY DOUBLE HEADER

College Girls' Basketball Teams to Battle York and Biglerville Aggregations in College Gym.

The girls' basketball team of Gettysburg College will play a double-header tonight at the college gymnasium.

At 7 o'clock second team will meet the Biglerville High School varsity in a lively preliminary. The Biglerville girls haven't lost a game this year and are confident of handing the college girls a reverse in their initial appearance. From advance reports practically the entire student body at Biglerville will come to Gettysburg to boost their team.

The college girls probable lineup will be: Viola Cromer, Dot Henne or Mary Stauffer at forwards; Reida Longanecker, center; Naomi Knecht, side center; Jane Chase and Letitia Griest at guards; with Verna Utz, Margaret Stauffer and Marie Cramer held in reserve.

The main fray will take place at 8 o'clock when the college girls' varsity lines up against the Thompson Business College team of York. It will be remembered that the Thompson girls handed the local sextet a trimming earlier in the season at York and the college girls are out for revenge.

Gettysburg's probable lineup for the game will be Pauline Schussler, Grace Fogle or Katherine Griest at the forward berths; Jessica Weaver, center; Esther Zelders, side center; Betty Richards and Anne Baker, guards.

THE BATTLEFIELD GUIDES

President Bushman, speaking for the Battlefield guides as president of their organization, sounded a gratifying note of cooperation with Gettysburg municipal and battlefield authorities, and community boosters, in his address at the complimentary dinner given by George W. Lynch to the guides at the Eagle Hotel, Tuesday evening.

Except for the specialized mercantile, professional and college group, the personnel of the guides is representative of the majority citizenship of Gettysburg as a whole. If some individual or group within their own ranks, in whom all the guides would show confidence, could speak authoritatively for them in any emergency when their support and influence is required, the guides could easily take the position of importance in the community life that rightly belongs to them.

There is no question but that the guides, at all times, want to do what is right and what is expected of them in every emergency. All that is necessary is for the guides to make up their minds to subordinate their individual opinions on occasions and abide by the decisions of the majority within their ranks and select someone to speak for them. They will not be in a position then to demand a hearing on all matters of importance to the community, but their advice, support and cooperation will be earnestly sought, as it should be.

The Gettysburg battlefield guides have the unique distinction of having probably the only organization of guides in the world, as President Bushman pointed out. The thing for them to do is to make that organization count for more for themselves and the community of which they are so vital a part. And the best way to do that is to help each other first and then, jointly, praise instead of criticize and lend their hopeful influence to community enterprise.

For, by doing that, they will not only be helping all of us, but at the same time they will be strengthening their own future security and prosperity.

JIGGS INSPIRES POEM

William F. Kirk, poet, is a warm friend of George McManus, who draws the world famous cartoon "Bringing Up Father" which is so popular with readers of The Gettysburg Times. He was present when the cartoonist was drawing some of his characteristic pictures of Jiggs and Maggie. Inspired by the occasion, he dashed off the following and presented the autographed original to Mr. McManus.

It Is To Laugh

Loads of chuckles let us carry through the month of January, And wherever we may tarry, let us tarry with a smile!
And we'll move our souls to laughter in the months that come thereafter,
Make them pleasant like the present and decidedly worth while!
Now the present's always pleasant, be you plutocrat or peasant,
If you follow poor old Jiggs as he has to stand the gaff.
For you're sure to keep on grinning, years on end our laughs he's winning,
And to Jiggs our faith we're pinning for a life-long laugh.

"I DUNNO!"

"I dunno!" says my Uncle Joe,
"What sort of a rich man I'd have made.

And I can't tell you whether or no
'Twould have suited me not to learn a trade;

Sometimes I think I'd like the show
From a front row seat, but I dunno!

"But I do know," says my Uncle Joe,
"Though I've had to work in the heat and shade

And I've had my share of trouble and woe,
Some fun I've made and some friends I've made.

Would I have been happier rich?
Praps so!
But still on the other hand, I
dunno!

"I dunno!" says my Uncle Joe,
"I might have made good as a millionaire;

I might have had friends 'twould be nice to know
And traveled about as a first class fare.

But I've stuck on the job for I couldn't go,
Maybe that's misfortune, but I
dunno!

"I dunno!" says my Uncle Joe,
"Too much money's a weight of care.

But I've four fine children that I know
Would glad the heart of a millionaire.

I could have had them with a fortune,
though,
Well, maybe I could, but I dunno!"

Longest Section Of Concrete Is 53 Miles

Harrisburg.—The longest section of concrete road in Pennsylvania is 53.69 miles in length. The section begins at East Weisport, Carbon county, and follows Route 164 to Stroudsburg; thence to the intersection of Route 254 and Route 168 at the northern Monroe county line. Immediately south of Mt. Pocono there is a section of hill side brick but the base is concrete.

Figures given out by the Department of Highways today show other long sections of highway. The Lincoln Highway is improved from Pittsburgh to Trenton; the William Penn Highway from Pittsburgh to the New Jersey line at Phillipsburg; the Susquehanna Trail from Maryland through Gettysburg, Harrisburg and Williamsport to the New York line;
the Lackawanna Trail from Philadelphia to a point south of Binghamton.
These highways comprise concrete,
brick, sheet asphalt and macadam.

Payroll Forces Of Coal Mines Have An Easy Time Now

Hazleton.—Payroll forces of anthracite coal operators have had an easy time since September, when the anthracite strike began. The only distribution of wages since the miners received their last pays is for maintenance men, who are permitted to remain on duty under an agreement with the operators and the clerks and executive staffs. These pays are taken care of easily and most of the companies have reduced their staffs to a minimum.

Many clerks have been put to work such as guard duty or shoveling stored coal around the breakers or banks. Some of them are getting outdoor exercises for the first time in years as a result of conditions created by the suspension.

HERSHEY GIVEN TERM IN PRISON

(By Associated Press.)
Lancaster, Jan. 20.—Harry H. Hershey, confessed embezzler of $41,000 from three Lancaster public utilities, pleaded guilty shortly after noon Tuesday and was sentenced by Judge Landis to serve from four and one-half to nine years in the Eastern Penitentiary.

HERSHEY GIVEN NINE YEARS FOR $41,000 THEFT

Former Lancaster Utilities
Cashier Pleads Guilty to Embezzlement.

Lancaster, Jan. 20.—Waiting until Judge Charles I. Landis was preparing to leave for the noon recess, Harry H. Hershey, confessed embezzler of $41,000 from three Lancaster utility companies, quietly entered the court room yesterday and pleaded guilty of embezzlement.

The courtroom was virtually deserted. Hundreds who had been present in anticipation that the former cashier and paymaster of the utility companies might be placed on trial had just left the room.

Hershey appeared slightly excited. Upon entering the courtroom he was directed to a chair by Colonel John M. Groff, his counsel, who pleaded for leniency on the ground that Hershey's mind was "deranged" on November 18, the day he fled with the three semi-monthly pay checks.

After listening to the plea, Judge Landis pronounced sentence which will keep Hershey in the Eastern Penitentiary for at least the next four and a half years. Hershey was ordered to serve one and one half years to three years and pay a fine of $500 on each of three counts. His maximum sentence is three years on each charge.

Hershey arose when sentence was pronounced, but refused to look at the judge. Instead he fixed his eyes on a spot on the wall directly over Judge Landis' head.

After listening to the sentence, Hershey was led from the court house by two bailiffs and Sheriff McAllister, and returned to the jail in a private automobile. He will be transferred to the Eastern Penitentiary within the next two weeks.

Hershey's plea came as a surprise. It had been anticipated by persons in close touch with his case that Colonel Groff was preparing to carry the fight before a jury in the hope of winning clemency.

Neither Mrs. Hershey, a school teacher, who has continued to meet her classes since November 18, nor her daughter, Catherine, were in court.

P. S. C. MEMBERS ARE SUBPOENAED

Senate Votes 33 to 11 to Call
Members of Commission Relative to Transit Decision.

(By Associated Press.)
Harrisburg, Jan. 20.—The Senate Tuesday by a vote of 33-11 sent to the finance committee a resolution by Senator Barr, Allegheny, calling for the subpoenaing of members of the public service commission before the Senate at 2 p. m. today in connection with the decision of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company fare case.

Four prohibition bills were before the Assembly Tuesday, two designed to strengthen the present enforcement act, one to wipe it out entirely and another to legalize 3.75 per cent. The measures to supplement the present law are bills backed by Governor Pinchot for control of distilleries and breweries.

The proposed repeal of the present law is sponsored by Senator Schantz, of Lehigh. The beer bill was sponsored by Representative John Stavitky, of Luzerne. It would permit the manufacture and sale of 3.75 per cent beer under licenses to be granted by the court. Although its sale in groceries would be prohibited it would be allowed in restaurants and hotels.

Bovine Tuberculosis Will Be Reduced

Harrisburg.—Prediction that bovine tuberculosis will be reduced to less than one-half of one per cent within the next eight years provided the State Department of Agriculture will receive the same amount of money for indemnity purposes in the next four years that has been available during the last year was made by Dr. S. E. Brunner, Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry, in an address prepared for delivery before the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association here today.

Eradication of tuberculosis among cattle made rapid progress during 1925, Dr. Brunner said, and approximately half a million cattle are to be given the test during 1926. Herds in Mercer, Crawford, Jefferson, McKean, Butler and Lawrence counties have already been tested. While a total of 230 townships in 34 counties are qualified and awaiting the tests.

MRS. LEIDER GETS DIVORCE

(By Associated Press.)
Norristown, Jan. 20.—Josephine Pancoast Widener Leidy, daughter of Joseph S. Widener, Philadelphia multi-millionaire, has been granted a divorce by the Montgomery county court, it became known Tuesday. Mrs. Leidy entered suit against her husband, Carter Randolph Leidy, last October.

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One boy gained 11 pounds in 7 weeks and is now strong and healthy.

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in seven weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at People's Drug Store and all druggists—but be sure and ask for McCoy's—the original and genuine.

Give them to the sickly, frail child for 30 days, and if they don't help—wonderfully. your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them. Adv.
